Stamp Out the Stigma of Recycled Water

Make Beer!

It takes 60 ounces of water to brew 12 ounces of beer. With increasing demand on water, breweries strive to cut their usage. Thanks to a 2016 Water Innovation Challenge grant, an Arizona-based mobile water-treatment plant is now delivering direct potable reuse water to beer breweries in Arizona and Colorado.

The Biggest Misconception About Back-up Power

Don't Rely on False Hope

You may think your uninterruptible power supply works, because you've started it up and checked. In this FacilitiesNet article, a nationally recognized engineering consultant reveals the biggest misconception facilities engineers have about the reliability of their back-up power.

If You Use Android

Your Back-up May Be in Danger

If your operating system of choice is Android, you should keep an eye on the expiration date of your back-up. If you or your organization have Android devices that are not in regular use or have been sent off for repair, beware: Your data may disappear!
